

DEEP FREEZE IS BACK
March 24, 2011

By Michael Erlewine (Michael@Erlewine.net)

Just when I thought I might be able to go out and sit quietly on the forest floor in the sun, we got hit with another large snowstorm. We are right back where we started from a month ago and temperatures plunged into the single digits again last night. Outside is like a freezer. I know: it is beautiful.

I am stuck at the window looking out and in with me is this little flowering sedum plant which has been a great harbinger of hope for spring for me. I picked it up at the local Meijer grocery store for a few bucks. What a great investment!

Look at it in high-res if you have the time and patience.

Do check out my new organized blog page:

<http://startypes.com/>

