

THE DAYS AFTER CHRISTMAS

December 27, 2011

By Michael Erlewine (Michael@Erlewine.net)

These days between Christmas and the New Year have always been an oddly uncomfortable time for me. Neither fish nor fowl, it is almost like vacation, but not quite, and as nice as it is, I keep finding myself waiting for this week to be over and for the New Year to kick in with my regular life once again.

Maybe it's because the rhythm of business is disrupted, everyone is on vacation, mail service is erratic, etc., but I find myself a bit at loose ends in these (for me) lost days right in the Bermuda Triangle at the end of the year, my own personal Limbo.

I am not complaining, just explaining.
