

AFTER THE STORM
June 9, 2011

By Michael Erlewine (Michael@Erlewine.net)

It went from 95 degrees out to cold in about an hour via a terrific thunderstorm with winds (they say) up to 75 mph, tearing limbs off trees and throwing whole trees on the ground.

This is a photo of a Yew bush after the rain, in the early morning.

