

SOLSTICE FLOWERS
June 21, 2010

By Michael Erlewine (Michael@Erlewine.net)

Taken at Big Rapids, Michigan

The summer solstice is always my favorite astrological special day, the midsummer night's dream for sure. Here are a couple of shots taken today early in the morning at about the time of the solstice.

Notice the little syrphid fly on the upper right of the yellow Evening Primrose. The primroses are biannual, meaning it is a feast one year and famine the next, but they bloom and bloom, only at night, but are truly loving in the early morning when this was taken.

