

FINDING ONESELF
December 18, 2010

By Michael Erlewine (Michael@Erlewine.net)

We are,
Both the finder,
And the found,
The silence,
And the sound.

Note from Michael:

It is winter now and the solstice is near, one of two favorite moments in the year, because it means that after the Solstice the sun moves northward toward spring. Each day will be longer and brighter and eventually warmer. I was a summertime baby, so I like it hot.

Not going outside much these days, so not many new photos. I am busy writing two new books for printed publication, one on blues and jazz and the second on the "Ann Arbor and the Sixties," which really might as well be on the 1960s anywhere. Those of you with memories of the 1960s you want to share, feel free to write them out and send them to me. They could end up in the book.
