

POINTING OUT
October 5, 2011

By Michael Erlewine (Michael@Erlewine.net)

Pointers,
Themselves,
Can just point.
They never are,
What they're,
Pointing to.

They always are,
Beside the fact,
And never facts,
Themselves.

However,
When a pointer,
Points at itself,
The intellect,
Short circuits,
And the mind,
May rest.

And that's a fact.

Michael Erlewine
October 4, 2011

Note: Not all poems are emotional. Some of them are logical exercises as is this one. I apologize if it is too didactic.